Dear Members of the FCC:

I am writing to say that net neutrality must be maintained. I depend on the internet's being open and available to me for matters of scholarly research, information gathering, and news materials. I do not want my actions on the internet to be made less effective because I am not rich enough to pay for special services and quicker speeds. I hope the members of the FCC will respect the fact that the internet currently is an open resource that does not block access if the person or group using the internet is not a rich corporation.

Please maintain net neutrality.

Sincerely,

Jane Liliendorf
