

7521106926.txt

The Internet is not something to be controlled by companies acting as middle men between the user and the content. With major providers (the "big six") increasingly controlling more and more of the television broadcast companies, it becomes increasingly concerning that they could (and currently can) control the availability/treatment of online media as well. Keep the Internet open to all; Net Neutrality is a must.