

7521107020.txt

There are many reasons why the defeat of Internet neutrality is a bad thing, and I believe there are more eloquent explanations out there than I could convey myself. I am simply writing to add my voice, as a computer science professional and a computer engineer, to the many voices that are requesting you retain and defend Internet neutrality. At a minimum, the treatment of all data equally should be retained. Ideally, you would reclassify Internet service to be similar to electricity, telephone, and water services - a common carrier. I implore you as a thoughtful body to seriously consider the ramifications of lifting Internet neutrality. Please do not take this decision lightly, and please try to think of the broader consequences of your decision.