

7521107857.txt

This net neutrality business may be the final straw for the FCC. Where is the anti-trust on these companies who have monopolized access? The access should be socialized, email has all but replaced most functions of the post office anyway. These cable companies shouldn't be allowed to provide Internet AND other services, at the very minimum they should be forced to split the companies up so as to not BLATANTLY represent a conflict of interest.