

7521108496.txt

For the sake of the freedom of information and free speech, the FCC should reclassify broadband internet as a common carrier telecommunications service. Internet service providers should never have the ability to discriminate the traffic that flows on their networks. Allowing ISPs to create so-called "fast lanes" would stifle the competition and thriving economy of the web, and would put the commerce and control of the internet into the hands of a few large corporations. Keep the internet free and equal by enforcing net neutrality.