

7521109240.txt

As our changing climate grows more difficult to predict and the power of storms strengthen it will be critical that unhindered communications be possible to any and all locations worldwide, in order to better prepare and respond to weather-related crises;
and as most internet-based telecommunications pass through United States services;
and as to set a precedent among other nations that the internet is a tool of incredible precision and speed for all users;
I request that you classify broadband internet as a telecommunications service.