I recently read that the FCC plans to allow "fast lanes" within the internet, allowing certain companies to pay to receive additional speed. This is a gateway to destroying the freedom of the internet, and it is disgusting to allow large corporate entities to control what was until now the ultimate vehicle for free market capitalism.

I hope you will think critically on the matter and place the real interests of American citizens and the public at large ahead of your personal interests. If you allow Net Neutrality to die, you will be doing irrevocable harm to our nation. For a nation that claims to be all about opportunity for the poor, we will be rendered hypocrites, taking away the chance for people to start up their own businesses online. The internet will load so much more slowly for any site that isn't paying cable companies a premium fee, that consumers will be less likely to visit any site that isn't being paid for. The FCC needs to reclassify broadband and Internet as a Title Two telecommunications service. It is inconceivable that chairman Tom Wheeler believes that ending net neutrality would be a positive change for anyone besides major corporations. He is selling out the public good to line his own pockets. Once net neutrality is ended by the FCC, it will be nigh impossible to revisit the issue. You and your colleagues actions will have huge repercussions for decades. I hope that hearing from an average citizen might have some sway on your judgement. Please do what is right, and make sure Net Neutrality is kept and enforced.
