

7521109954.txt

The issue of net neutrality has come to my attention, and I fear that eliminating net neutrality will cause many problems for generations to come. The Internet is a massive place upon which very many citizens and businesses and even the government itself depends upon. I believe that allowing a few companies to control access to this powerful tool will allow them to alter the course with which the Internet is growing. Eliminating net neutrality gives ISP's the power to halt certain companies in their tracks, and allowing others to rise up instead. I believe that giving these companies this much power is ill advised and that the FCC should allow net neutrality to remain in place.