

7521110182.txt

Dear Federal Communications Commission,

If cable companies are allowed to control the flow of information without net neutrality, the most amazing aspect of the internet could be put in danger: the accessibility of the information it provides. Although it is not certain that they would, cable companies must not be given the opportunity to restrict the quality or accessibility of certain websites. Net Neutrality must be maintained.