

7521111513.txt

Chief Justice John Marshall established in McCulloch v. Maryland (1819) that "the power to tax is the power to destroy". ISP providers charging for some parts of the internet is approximately equivalent to a tax, and as such, they have the power to destroy the parts of the internet that they may dislike or don't want to compete with. Please keep the net neutral; classify broadband internet as a title II telecommunications service.