

7521111588.txt

Broadband companies should not be in control of the content an internet user can access, any more than a bus service should be able to decide which stops each passenger is "allowed" to get off on. The internet should remain a neutral resource for all users, and only limited by all users.