

7521111596.txt

I am writing to have broadband internet classified as a title II common carrier telecommunications service. Removing net neutrality laws would give service providers the power to slow down internet speed and then charge you for "faster" internet when in reality all you're getting is the speed you had before. This also grants providers the ability to "snuff out" competition by slowing down the competitors web page and their(competitors) traffic. I would also like to state that competition is the economic backbone from which innovation and growth are founded upon.