

7521111876.txt

Granting extended powers over internet traffic to service providers is a monumentally poor idea. Broadband internet service should, and for the sake of the future of this country must, be classified as a title II common carrier telecommunications service.