

7521111973.txt

Common carrier status is the only way to ensure the fair and robust continuation of the internet as we know it. The recent proposal allowing "two-tier" service is equivalent to a phone company allowing telemarketers who pay a high fee unlimited access to your telephone lines, while people you really want to talk to have to wait on slower speeds or suffer through static. ISPs are de facto monopolies with profit-only motives, who will abuse this power if granted.