I strongly urge the FCC to redefine the internet as a "common carrier". The internet is the public commons of today and for the near future. There should be no privilege given to one source of information over another. I strongly support the concept of "net neutrality." I am appalled that our country is at best second rate in the world with regard to internet and mobile phone access and capability. That we have been bypassed by countries that used to be third world is unacceptable. I believe that allowing our internet service companies to give preferential performance to some information providers will severely constrain the creativity and growth of our country. The Supreme Court has invited the FCC to make this change in designation. I ask that you do so. If you will not take this step, then you need to find some other means to ensure and enhance net neutrality.
