I am writing to encourage the FCC to support net neutrality and reclassify ISPs as common carriers. I understand there may be pressure from lobbying interests, but defending the equal treatment of internet traffic is essential to the economic growth and technological development of our nation.

There is little to no disagreement among citizens who understand the infrastructure of the internet, the debate is purely among politicians and corporations who could receive monetary gain if net neutrality enforced upon internet service providers. This alone should make it clear what the two sides of this argument really are.
