Having open internet is one of the most important things for America and for 21st century citizen. In order to keep innovation and freedom we keep our internet providers honest and treat them like we treat water pipes or power lines that provide utilities for my home. If we allow ISP to limit or promote certain things of what i can access via internet, we opening the doors for elite companies to take over internet as we know and stifle future innovation. No more Google, Wikipedia, Netflix or other great services and sites that came from simple people. We need to limit ISP to their core functionality: Provide Internet Service, not Internet content. Please consider to classify Internet Service Providers as Title II Common Carriers. We need FCC to stand up for American People like me, you, my and your neighbor, not multinational corporations without the face.

Sincerely,
Simon
