There is this recent issue that is really important to many people that use the internet and needs to be addressed, and this issue is Net Neutrality. The internet is a free place that needs to be free. With this freedom we communicate with each other, share things with each other, meet new people, etc. I know of many people who make their living off the internet, even I've started to. If the internet ceases to be a free place for the benefit of a few people (the wealthy ones), it will affect the lives of many many people negatively.

The internet has been almost as common as having water or electricity. And just like water or electricity, there should be no limit to the internet a person receives to their home. Would you like to pay a premium to get more water to your house? Would you like to pay a premium for extra light bulbs or a use of a dryer in your house?

Keep net neutrality.
