I do not agree with going away with certain aspects of "Net Neutrality". I know nobody will actually read this, but allowing the data flow to potentially be controlled by the ISP website by website, server to server, is absolutely insane. We as people have come so far; why on earth would we allow any ISP that wants to (potentially) limit the availability of information? All this would do is inhibit growth and pad the pockets of those who already have more than anyone could ever dream of.
