Can you imagine if electric companies could have a "fast lane" for watts? That they could limit the amount of watts an appliance consumes over another? Bits is the same as watts. We will always need more and everything should be treated equal. The alternative will be having my electric company tell me that I can get a +10$ plan to get "fast watts" for my new TV, or even better buy the TV they sell since it has free "fast watts" included.
