The internet is more than telecommunication, or Common Carrier, the internet is more than Television and Radio. It holds a ground for shopping, social media, data, media and much much more. I understand that media is a common occurrence for internet, just as television holds media. But to say that small part is the reason we need to treat it in that sense is ridiculous.

I'm not a scholar or a very important person. I just worry in the sense that limiting what we see and do on the internet is not protecting us. It gives companies more control on what we see rather than allowing us to see on our own. We have access to infinite things and we grew the best through the internet.

I'm still new on the topic and I would like to research more on this and I would like to without my internet being different when I wake up.
