

7521114065.txt

I'm an American citizen and frequent internet user, and not just a user of popular websites. And I, along with most of my country, demand net neutrality be kept, for the sake of competition, fairness, and opportunity. One person with decent programming skills can go viral in one day because of data equality. People around the world can communicate with us because of data equality. The only people benefitting from the removal of neutrality, are the shady middlemen that have likely bought our politicians.

The internet is the one truly equal place throughout the world. And it should be a pride of our country, not something to put profits in to slow down. Don't ruin what your people have. We need it.