Reclassi fy broadband internet as a title II common carrier telecommunications service.

Net Neutrality is essential because a free and open internet is the democratization of media and information. Net Neutrality is also essential if we are to keep the internet as an economic resource for the masses. If you take into account the implications of chaos theory, even little actions can have large consequences given enough time, and changing the nature of the internet, a technology that's connected to almost every person in the first world, is not a little action, it is literally one of the, if not the, most significant changes that can be made, and if net neutrality is lost, then the internet as we know it will stagnate and die, and this will have profound negative consequences in the next decades.

Do not make this decision lightly.
