

7521114104.txt

Please, defend net neutrality. The internet has become a place for research, development, and the sharing of information in a free and equal environment. A place where large companies and small companies can compete. Where one man's crazy website can be given the same importance, for free, as a government's website, again for free. No fine print needed.