Not to sound unappreciative of ISP's and all of their help with allowing me on the internet to benefit my day to day routine, but allowing them to favor where their "fast lanes" will go will reallocate too much power over the genuine freedom we have on the internet and that is a terrible thing for the average internet citizen and a great thing for a company who wants more money and control of what I am allowed and not allowed to watch. The internet is fast enough. Classify broadband internet as a title ii telecommunications service.
