I'm writing to request that broadband internet be classified as a common carrier service. While I've heard of and can imagine ways in which it may benefit society to give better internet access to some (e.g. hospitals), overall it seems much too likely that this inequality would ultimately serve as a huge disservice to society, and increase social inequality. Access to internet is becoming more and more central to our everyday lives, and it should be as our access to air - fair and equal.

Thank you.
