This would majorily benefit two companies in the United States and screw over everyone else. Verizon and Comcast, which recently absorbed Time Warner Cable showing that it is a monopoly, are the two main companies that would benefit from this and cripple the connections for everyone else. The internet structure in the United States is already one of the worst in the world, and by ending net neutrality, you would be effectively be making us look like China who controls what their people can look up on the internet, which should be defined as illegal. Oppressing the small-time businesses in this country is exactly what is wrong with it, and should not be allowed to continue or else it will falter.
