

7521114549.txt

Broadband internet should be labeled as a telecommunications service. The point of the internet is to spread information to people to who want to know it, it is inherently a library whose doors are in every household in America.