

7521114668.txt

Internet Service Providers should be reclassified as Common Carriers. The Internet was created, and has thrived, as an open platform for content authorship and exchange. If the U.S. government is to truly represent the best interests of its citizens, it should strive at every opportunity to preserve, rather than to erode, the open and egalitarian nature of the Internet.