The United States has the worst internet service, with the least competition - no competition for most citizens -, and the highest prices of any western nation, even though it's our invention. It has become thus due to a lack of proper regulation.

It has become time to classify Internet Service Providers as Title II Common Carriers. The possibilities for abuse are just too great otherwise. Failure to do so will cripple the future economic well being of the United States, stifle innovation, and limit the freedom of consumers to choose the content they desire.

By reclassing ISPs we can restore order and sanity to our nation's Internet and once again be the best in the world, rather than 37th (and dropping).

You, the FCC, are empowered to act in the public trust.

That means you are the People's representative.

Not the industry's.

The means you are beholden to the People.

Not the industry.

It's high time you acted like it.
