In the past decade, there have been numerous attempts on restricting the internet, which, while it can be chaotic, is free and exciting.

The internet has paved the way for countless careers, success stories, and information to all. With Net Neutrality quickly dwindling, I'm afraid that the internet will become unusable or too much of a burden to bother with.

Don't allow companies to monopolize and peg other companies to not limit access or speed to their websites or services.

If you don't take the number of public filings on this proceeding seriously, you will see how we feel come November.
