So we are allowing the biggest cable/ISP company to absorb the 2nd biggest? How does this even make sense in Capitalism? If we are going to have monopolies for everything we should rename our economy to something more appropriate, because it definitely is no longer capitalism. Capitalism implies an inherent need to have COMPETITION in order for the market to select the winner. When you allow these huge corporate mergers it means less choice for the consumer. But then again, maybe the FCC is bought and paid for by big business.... prove us wrong!
