

7521117447.txt

I think internet access is going to be more important than phone service ever was. Rather than allowing carriers to decide what people can access and at what speeds, we should be going the other direction: requiring access, and making internet public utilities if necessary.