

7521117776.txt

Net neutrality is a hugely important part of fair internet use. Companies who provide internet service should be required to maintain net neutrality. If this were not maintained, the government would basically be handing over control of internet commerce to a handful of corporations, which would potentially and likely restrict national and international trade to a detrimental level. These companies would also have control over much of the information flow nationally, influencing politics and popular opinion by restricting access to news media, educational resources, and other important outlets. Let's keep this from happening!