Look. I'm not a lawyer, or professional lobbyist, I don't know the big words or the right things to say. However, I'm the person you exist to protect from things like monopolies. I live in a monopoly. I already have ONLY ONE CHOICE for Internet where I live, not the city I live in, the apartment I live in. Yes, they do things like contract with a single company. I don't know if that should be legal or not, but it feels WRONG. Furthermore, this was the case when I lived in an actual house. I hate Comcast, they have nice people in the store down the street, but I hate everything they stand for. They're an evil company. You know it. I know it. Eventually people will realize it, but then it'll be too late. The shitty part is I can't even show them that I hate them because it's them or no Internet. I -require- the Internet to work remotely as a web developer. This is my life, and I can't choose to give my money to someone else even though the company I'm forced to pay does evil things like throttle Netflix to my house.

That's wrong. Approving mergers that take away even more choice is wrong. You know it's wrong so don't let it happen.
