So lets create the largest monopoly and remove all the competition... ?Is this really happening? I ask myself. Censorship of the internet? ISPs are common carriers. Period. They do not have the right to filter, slow, moderate, deny, or affect in any way the content in which we, the public, wish to view or access.

We are paying for the shipment of information via internet access. And the profit model is in supplying the paying customer with access to said information, much like a phone company cannot dictate who you can call, nor drop the call from another carrier?s system.

We need true neutrality here, it is a slippery slope, if you let them enact deals, like the extortion they pulled with Netflix, everyone will, scratch that, IS suffering because of it. Business, ideas, innovation, startups all will be stifled with this kind of tom foolery. Stop it NOW.

Classify the ISPs as ?Common Carriers?? And stop the monopoly; I can remember when I had 7 to 10 choices for internet access in my area, now I have one. And they are throttling my access I know it. I?ve tested it, I have seen the results. We need competition in this industry to foster choice, not price fixing.
