

7521118834.txt

Allowing the telecommunications companies that administrate the telecommunications service, collectively referred to as the internet, charge people twice for the internet is a violation of the constitution of the United States of America. Content providers and customers pay for access to the internet and the equipment necessary to access this infrastructure. Allowing it to be monopolized by only a few giant corporate conglomerates is already a shameful act. This displays the corrupt nature of the lobbyist and lawyers that "represent" these companies money, but I digress.

First Verizon waste tax payer money by splitting hairs with the FCC in a court room. Now Comcast has openly begun using their controlling power over the infrastructure of the internet to unconstitutionally deny American citizens their freedom of speech and freedom of assembly by prioritizing access to content and other online gathering places by the amount of money that content providers pay these infrastructure mafia bosses.

These telecom companies should not be allowed to argue as to why something the UN and many other countries have declared a human right is not a basic telecommunications service. These companies should stop wasting tax payer dollars spinning around in the US legal system and voluntarily accept they are administrating a telecommunications service and behave as such. If they refuse and wish to continue to use high priced lobbyist and lawyers to violate the constitution they should be held accountable. Everyone culpable should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law for violating the US constitution as well as violating a basic human right. That is, fair and equal access to an open internet infrastructure.

The bottom line is not the telecom companies dollar but the violation of the constitution and human rights they are committing. The US government owes it to its citizens to stop these companies illegal actions post haste. This is a circus side show the telecoms have organized to distract us from their criminal actions. The citizens of this fine country must come together and hold these companies up to the measure of the criminal laws they violate if the people charged with guarding the US government are only persuaded by lobbyists money and private lawyer threats from the telecoms.