

7521119809.txt

The Internet must remain in the state it is. ISP's should not be able to charge more to the consumer for certain sites. When one searches for something all websites should be available to that person. I know that the big ISP's may try to talk their way into controlling what the people see and make it sound like a good idea, it is not. The internet is the last somewhat free place that the American people have left.