

7521119832.txt

The internet bears so little difference to telephone service that I cannot understand why it isn't ALREADY classified as a telecommunications service.

Corporations don't need even more power than they've already paid for when they bought their senators and congressmen fair and square. Please be the one federal agency that still pretends to care about the actual people it serves.