

7521120162.txt

Broadband internet should be considered a telecommunications service.

No one should be able to dictate speed of access to information.

Information demands to be free.

ISPs built their infrastructure using the money and effort of their customers and should not be able to turn that build into a cage.