Please, kind sirs at the FCC.

REALLY? i mean REALLY? giving up net neutrality wont benefit the economy, of course it wouldn't, the only people it would benefit are the internet providers, and they sure and heck dont have a good track record of circling money back into the economy. the united states is dismally pathetic already in internet service compared other developed countries and having this go through would make it even worse. freedom and equality is what we stand for, and frankly, this spits in that ideas face.
