

7521120811.txt

I am a young aspiring entrepreneur and developer who is ashamed with the state of innovation in the US's Internet today. Large companies have lobbyists and legal departments who are able to sue and win in frivolous lawsuits against small ISP startups, which would like to change or improve the Internet. The only new ISP that shows promise of making it through the lawsuits of these supergiants is Google. Even worse, there are examples, such as with Netflix and Comcast, where the ISPs can blackmail companies to pay them more money for the service they were already paid for. In some areas, there are even monopolies for Internet service. Please fix and make laws that prevent ISPs from abusing their power and using it for evil. Also, turn down the "Fast Lanes" proposal, which is clearly not neutrality.

Thank You,
Theo Tosi ni