The internet is not owned by the ISPs. We, the American people, will not be receiving any benefit from Verizon and Comcast (who now owns Time Warner Cable which was also not in the best interest of the American public.) double dipping their greedy hands into not only our pockets, but now the pockets of companies that are run over the internet. Americans will end up paying more for less as these companies will pass their costs onto the consumers. Smaller websites will be throttled by the ISPs if they do not cough up enough money. American innovation on the internet will be stopped in its tracks.

Make the ISPs common carriers.
