Hello,

As a concerned, taxpaying, and voting citizen of the United States, I wanted to lodge my complaints over the measures being proposed by the FCC regarding their approach to Net Neutrality.

I understand completely that this is a complicated subject with a multitude of players asking for a variety of things, but the simple truth is that allowing the creation of a Fast Lane such as has been proposed will not serve the interest of the American people. Communications companies already have created their own toe-hold through which to demand additional money from content providers and this will allow them the means by which they can legally change the landscape of the internet as we know it.

Please do not continue with this plan. Consider instead a scheme wherein all ISPs are classified as common carriers and force them to have some responsibility.

Thank you,
~Daniel
