Please do not allow net neutrality to go away. As a consumer and voting American citizen, I utterly oppose the idea of an internet "fast lane". Allow corporations to control the distribution of data at your own economic and political risk. This idea of 'fast lanes' has all the hallmarks of some one/some entity trying to incite violent revolution. People shouldn't need to go to such lengths to convince their 'representatives' to listen to their demands. If you want to continue to exercise control over the population, don't take the one thing that makes them believe they have freedom. The illusion of freedom created by net neutrality is far more important to the stability of America than the money these corporations and lobbyists are paying to get the FCC to change this rule.
