Bring back net neutrality. The idea that large corporations are given the ability to control what data and what content the user decides they want to view is ridiculous. The internet is the most powerful tool the human race has ever created, from communication of ideas, to commerce, to electronic currency, without a free internet, we would essentially be living in a world that wasn't free. Besides, look at the great countries that limit their users internet; North Korea, China, Iran... those are great countries to be listed with. Whether it's government or corporations limiting freedom, freedom is still limited.
