As a public librarian I am deeply committed to maintaining net neutrality. Information is increasing in value at an exponential rate in the 21st century, and keeping the Internet a free and open arena is the single best way I can think of to enable people to raise or maintain their socioeconomic status. If you want the income inequality to increase in this country until it reaches a breaking point, by all means let Comcast and the other media giants have their way. If you want a more stable economic future where parents can have hope that their children will have better lives than they did, please protect net neutrality. Thank you.
