The current proposal for a dual-speed, 2-tier internet is unacceptable. This concept is the exact opposite of "neutral" network, and antithetical to all that the internet should be. ISPs must be regulated as Common Carriers. This is not a "nuclear option" but a common-sense option.

A dual-speed internet is a death sentence for online innovation. It ensures a pay-to-play network that will crush small competitors and innovators before they even begin. It will calcify the internet of the future as being forever dominated by the big online players of today. Today's frontrunning online innovators would have never gotten a start if the proposed dual-speed internet had existed in years past.

"No" to a dual-speed internet! Regulate ISPs as Common Carriers.
