

7521123507.txt

Being a self employed media professional, I rely on the internet to communicate with my clients, as well as transfer and store vital business data via FTP and cloud services. The idea that my relatively small data usage could be curbed in favor of corporations with significant financial power is disturbing to me on a personal level, but also on a broader level seems to go directly against what the internet itself was created to be. So both personally and altruistically I ask you to please reclassify broadband internet as a common carrier service, and do everything in your power to maintain a truly open internet in America.