I am opposed to the merger of Comcast and Time Warner Cable. The Comcast monopoly is too big as it is. In my area, I only have the option of Comcast or a satellite service. I believe that cable marketers should be allowed to resell cable and internet services just like the natural gas marketers resell natural gas in Georgia. This would allow more competition and help to lower prices.

Being a cable company, Comcast should not have been allowed to buy NBC/Universal. Now, Comcast owns several satellite network programming suppliers, a major news outlet as well as movie studios and amusement parks. Comcast is in a position to manipulate information presented to the public to unfairly sway public opinion.

As a precedent, when Scripps Howard moved into the programming and TV network arena, it divested itself of its cable interests.
